FAST EATERS!

A DAY AT OUR RANCH

I have to turn back the clock of my life many years to take you as my guest to the ranch my father once owned. You can thus spend with us one day at the Bar-H Ranch. During days, or perhaps weeks, of the busy season when most of the men are absent on the round-ups, the door of the home ranch may be closed. It may be closed but not locked, for on the frontier locks and bars were unknown. The ways of the South always flavored the life of the cattle country, whether in Texas or Wyoming, far more than the ways of the North and East.

There is no lock upon the door of our ranch house, whether it be empty or occupied. It constitutes the only home the cowboy has. Here he returns from the more active duties of the round-up or the drive and takes up the less exacting routine of everyday ranch life. The cowboy is a horseman and nothing more. Hence he has little inclination for any work that can not be done in the saddle.

Thus, if the cowboy feels obliged to go out for wood, he goes out on horseback. His idea of the correct way to get a log of wood to camp is to drag it at the end of his lariat. If a wagon is mired down in the quicksands of a soft crossing, the cowboy who comes to the aid of the driver does not dismount. He makes fast his rope to some holding place on the wagon and trusts to his saddle girths for the rest. The cowboy has a mild contempt for all walking and driving men. In his own line of work he can be a miracle of tireless energy.

However, the day of ordinary ranch life is not of great activity nor of haste. The chores which the cowpuncher considers within his province are very few and simple. If in the winter some horses are kept up under feed in the ranch stables, he may feed his own horse, but no other man's. The day at the ranch begins early, for by daybreak the men have slept enough. There is little to induce them to stay up late at night. As a rule, the cowboys are rather silent men. However, not so silent as the melancholy sheep herders. A cowboy who is "mouthy" is not usually in high repute at a cow camp.

The cook, is of course, the first one up about the place. After work, if it happens to be cold, the first work is attending the riding horses kept in the stables. Behind each horse in the stable is a long wooden peg upon which hang the bridle and saddle. It is the rule never to touch the rope, quirt, or other parts of another cowboy's outfit. Of course, one man will not want to use another's saddle.

"I wouldn't ride a mile in that thing o' yours for the best heifer that runs the range," says one cowboy, referring contemptuously to the prized saddle of another.

"I'd plum have a misery if I had to ride yours," is the reply.

Part or all of the horse herd will not be kept up at the ranch house, but it will be watched so that their whereabouts will be known. A cowboy may be sent out in the morning to bring in one horse herd. Then follows one of the most picturesque events of the day.

The bunch of horses comes up on a gallop, urged by the cowboy behind them. All sorts of horses are in the collection. All of them rough of coat and hard of form. And not one of them has a pleasant expression as he turns into the ranch corral, with his ears drooping and his eyes rolling about in search of trouble. Inside the corral each horse runs about and dodges behind his fellows when he fancies himself wanted. He is doing his best to escape when he falls into meek quiet as he feels the circle of rope. The cowboy leads him out and throws the heavy saddle on his back.

The horse stands there the picture of forlornness and despair, apparently upon his very last legs and quiet unfit for travel. The cowboy pays no attention to all of this but proceeds to cinch up the saddle. As he begins this the horse heaves a deep long breath which converts him temporarily into something of the figure of a balloon. The cowboy knows what this means, and putting his foot against the side of the horse, he gives a quick, strong pull on the girth, which causes the horse to grunt in a grievous way and to lessen his size abruptly.

The hind cinch is not drawn tight for in regard to that, the cow horse feels that it has certain rights to breathing room which even the cowboy is bound to respect. In any case, the pony may pitch a little when the cowboy swings into the saddle. Especially if it has not been ridden for some time.

As Jim, our cowboy and one whom I liked very much when I was a youngster on the ranch, rides along on his day's work, he sees many things which a tenderfoot would not notice. He notes where a deer has crossed the ranch road. Where the wolves have been playing in the sand. Where the bob cat has walked along the muddy bank. He sees the track of the horse which crossed and can tell whether or not it is a fresh track. Perhaps it is part of his day's work to look up some of the ranch horses which have strayed away.

The range in summer time is a breezy and not unpleasant place to be in spite of the brilliant sun. Always the eyes of the cowboy roam over the expanse ahead. He can tell farther than the tenderfoot what is going on out on the horizon. He knows what is this distant horseman crossing the flat ahead. If it is a cowboy, he knows him because he rides straight up in his stirrups with no crooking-back of the leg. If it is an Indian, he will be sitting hunched up, with his stirrups very short and his leg bent back under the horse's belly, riding with the calf of his leg rather than with the thigh or knee.

If Jim does not think that a certain horseman should be there at this part of the range, he may stop and unsling the field glasses which he sometimes carries with him as an aid in his work. He sees a little bunch of young cows running up out of a draw and suspects that the gray wolves may have pulled down a calf there. He sees the coyotes, reddish in the warm sun, sneaking off across the plain. He notes the low sweep of a big eagle, and watches a long time the actions of a bunch of antelopes.

As he rides along the range, the cowboy keeps an eye out along the watering places to note any animal that may have become mired down. When he sees a big steer thus entrapped, Jim rides up to the edge of the boggy place and sets about pulling out the animal.

Jim does not love a rattlesnake nor does his horse. He takes a shot or so at the snake with his six-shooter not heeding the objections of the pony to the gun. A cow horse has to get used to a great many strange things. Or Jim may dismount and kill the snake with his quirt, rather a short-ranked weapon for such a case.

Some day at the cowboy is riding his rounds about the range, his quick eye may note out on the horizon a faint cloud which has not the appearance of a dust trail. This he regards intently, stopping his pony and looking steadfastly toward the spot. The little cloud does not pass away or grow less, but it widens and rises and all at once fans out on the wind taking on the unmistakably blue of smoke. This is fire!

If the grass be full and high, as it is on some parts of the cattle country, and if the wind be strong and in the right direction, the prairie fire will soon be a terrible thing. Everything is in danger. The entire profit of the season will be destroyed as well as all the possibilities for next year. The cowboy rides back at full speed and gives the alarm. The cowboys all know what to do in such a case. Some of the men look to the buildings, carefully back-burning a brood strip around them, so that the full sweep of the fire will not have to be met there.

Riding along the edge of the line of the flame, two cowboys drag at the ends of their ropes a wet green hide, a pile of wet blankets, or anything that will serve to drag down and beat out the flame which must be stopped. Sometimes help can be obtained in time from a neighboring ranch. The danger is common and hence all will help.

Jim taught me to ride, to read "trail," and to shoot. Those boyhood days on the ranch were wonderful. The traveller was always welcomed. News came to us by letter, books, magazines, old newspapers, and even by "gossip." In the old days, deer, antelope, wild turkey, and sometimes smaller game often appeared on the menu of the ranch.

There are now oil wells where the cattle once ranged freely on the ranch. In place of the horses are jeeps and automobiles. Even the airplane is being used by some of the ranchers to keep an eye on their property. The radio and television have moved the East right into the West.

But as long as there is the thirst for adventure, then the Western Ranch will exist. The cowboy will always be on hand to meet any situation even when the first spaceship from Mars lands on the Bar-H Ranch!

DON'T PLAY CARDS WITH ELEGANT AL HAMILTON, RED! YUH KNOW HE'S CROOKED!

EVERYBODY KNOWS THAT! BUT HE'S TOO SMART TO COLD DECK ME!

READY TO TRY YOUR LUCK, GENTLEMEN? THE TABLE'S WAITING--

NOT ME, HAMILTON! I WORK HARD FOR MY MONEY!

MASKED RAIDER

HE HAD TO ADMIRE HAMILTON WHEN HE DEALT! THE GAMBLER'S DEFT FINGERS COULD DO ANYTHING WITH A DECK---!!

WHAT WILL IT BE, MAGRUE?
LAST TIME?

QUIT NOW, RED! THIS TINHORN WON'T LOSE ANY MORE POTS! HE LET YOU HAVE YOUR FUN!

I'M NOT FOOL ENOUGH TO TRY TO MATCH YOUR GUNSPED, BONNEY!
PLEASE LEAVE THE
TABLE! YOU'RE NOT PLAYING!

I'LL LEAVE, BUT I WON'T GO FAR!
REMEMBER, RED'S
MY FRIEND!

HE'S A GROWN MAN!
LET HIM PLAY HIS OWN
CARDS AND FIGHT
HIS OWN FIGHTS!

RED WAS AS FAST AS THE AVERAGE COWHAND WITH HIS COLT-- BUT AL WASN'T WORRIED ABOUT HIM!!
HE DELIBERATELY LET THE REDHEAD SEE HIM
CHEAT ON THE LAST DEAL---

HOLD IT, HAMILTON!
I SAW THAT!

BETTER FORGET
WHAT YOU SAW, RED!

YUH HAD A SLEEVE--
UNGH!!

IT'S SMALL BUT IT
THROWS A FIFTY CALIBER SLUG, COWBOY!

DON'T TRY ANY-THING, BONNEY!
RED PULLED FIRST!

I SAW IT, HAMILTON!
THAT'S A PRETTY SLICK
SPRINGLOAD HOLSTER YUH CARRY UP YOUR
SLEEVE! BUT IT WON'T WORK IF, YUH TRY
IT ON ME!

MASKED RAIDER

AL HAMILTON KNEW BILLY THE KID WOULDN'T FORGET THE INCIDENT--AND HE HAD NO INTENTION OF FACING HIM IN A FAIR FIGHT!

I HEARD YOU WERE GOING TO BUCK HAMILTON, BILLY! THAT TRUE?

YEAH--AS SOON AS I STOW THIS STUFF WITH MY SADDLE, I'LL HUNT HAMILTON UP!

THAT GALOOT WITH THE RIFLE WHO WAS TRAILING ME IS OUT OF SIGHT! I GOT A FEELING HE'S---

THE LIVERY STABLE OPERATOR HAD SEEN IT ALL -- HIS TESTIMONY CLEARED BILLY BUT IT WAS DARK WHEN HE GOT TO THE RED DOG CAFE!

A FRIEND OF YOURS ASKED FOR YUH BEFORE HE CASHED IN! HE DIDN'T FINISH A JOB HE STARTED!

I HAVE NO FRIENDS BUT A DECK OF CARDS! THEY ALWAYS STAND UP!

LET'S SEE IF THEY DO, THIS TIME, HAMILTON.

I'VE BEEN WAITING FOR YOU, BONNEY! I WANT TO TELL YOU SOMETHING--

MASKED RAIDER

THEN BILLY UNDERSTOOD! HAMILTON HADN'T BEEN QUITE READY WHEN HE SAT DOWN! THE GUNSLINGER WHO'D LEFT, HAD GONE FOR HELP---

MASKED RAIDER

ANOTHER WAITED AT THE BAR!

AND A THIRD WAS IN A HOTEL ROOM ACROSS THE STREET. THIS ONE WAS THE REAL DANGER----

MASKED RAIDER

BILLY, THE KID INSTINCTIVELY MADE THE RIGHT MOVE FIRST! HE TURNED, GUN BLAZING AS HIS COLT LINED UP WITH THE WINDOW ----

ONE DOWN!

I'VE GOT THIS BUSHWACKER, BILLY! WATCH HAMILTON!

YUH CHOKED UP IN THE CLUTCH HAMILTON! NO SECOND CHANCES!

YOU LUCKY FOOL! I'LL GET YOU YET!

YOU SHOULD HAVE STUCK TO CARDS, HAMILTON! SHOOTING IRONS ARE MY SPECIALTY!

THE WOUNDED MAN AT THE BAR AND THE OTHER AT THE WINDOW READILY ADMITTED HAMILTON'S PLAN! BUT A PIECE WAS MISSING!

THAT CLEANS IT UP, BILLY! WHERE YOU GOING?

TO SEE RED MAGRUE! I GOT A HUNCH!

I WATCHED THEM SETTIN' UP THE AMBUSH AND FIGURED THIS WOULD BE A GOOD SPOT! I SNUCK AROUND AND FOUND HIM HERE!

NICE GOING, RED! I GOT ALL YOUR MONEY BACK AND A BONUS FOR OUR TROUBLE!

THE END

A New Hobby Gives You A Brand New Interest!

Yes, anyone from 5 to 80 can draw or sketch or paint anything now—the very first time you use the Magic Art Reproducer like a professional artist—no matter how hopeless you think you are! An unlimited variety and amount of drawings can be made. Art is admired and respected by everyone. Most hobbies are expensive, but drawing costs very little, just some inexpensive paper, pencils, crayons, or paint. No costly upkeep, nothing to wear out, no parts to replace. It automatically reproduces anything you want to draw on any sheet of paper. Then easily and quickly follow the lines of the "picture image" with your pencil and you have an accurate original drawing that anyone would think an artist had done. No guesswork, no judging sizes and shapes! Reproduces black and white and actual colors for paintings.

Also makes drawing larger or smaller as you wish.

Anyone can use it on any desk, table, board, etc.—indoors or outdoors! Light and compact to be taken wherever you wish. No other lessons or practice or talent needed! You'll be proud to frame your original drawings for a more distinctive touch to your home. Give them to friends as gifts that are "different" and appreciated.

Have fun! Be popular! Everyone will ask you to draw them. You'll be in demand! After a short time you may find you can draw well without the Magic Art Reproducer because you have developed a "knack" and feeling artists have—which may lead to a good paying art career.
